

Australia secures total of 20 M Pfizer-BioNTech vaccine doses

05 February 2021 | News

Around 150 million vaccine doses to be injected starting from late February

The Australian Government has secured an additional 10 million doses of the Pfizer-BioNTech COVID 19 vaccine on the advice of the Scientific Industry Technical Advisory Group on Vaccines. Through the Government's Advance Purchase Agreement with Pfizer, this additional 10 million vaccines means Australia will now receive 20 million Pfizer doses in 2021.

Australia has access to over 150 million vaccine doses. The vaccination program remains on track for the commencement of delivery in late February to people in the first priority group, Phase 1a. Australia is a vaccination nation—we have one the highest vaccination rates in the world.

As the rollout begins, people who need protection the most will get the vaccine first. This includes aged care and disability care residents and workers, frontline health care workers, and quarantine and border workers.

The priority groups have been determined based on the advice of the Australian Technical Advisory Group on Immunisation (ATAGI) which oversees Australia's highly successful immunisation program.

The Australian Government is also extending free access to COVID-19 vaccines to all visa-holders in Australia. This will include refugees, asylum seekers, temporary protection visa holders and those on bridging visas. People currently residing in detention facilities will also be eligible, including those whose visas have been cancelled.

Australia has entered into four separate agreements for the supply of COVID-19 vaccines, if they are proved to be safe and effective. Combined, these agreements will ensure access to approximately 150 million doses.

The Australia Government, states and territories, regulators and the health and medical sectors are working together to finalise arrangements under the Australian Vaccination Strategy and detailed roll out plans.
