Healthcare venture Arcondis Group announces new subsidiary in Singapore

April 26, 2021 | News

The new location will be playing a key role in Arcondis's global strategy to support disease prevention, diagnosis, and therapies

Arcondis Group, a global consulting company with a unique focus on the Healthcare and Life Science industries, announced the opening of its new subsidiary in Singapore.

Group CEO Stewart Spears says: “This is a good day both for Arcondis and for our existing and potential clients in the APAC region. This new location will be playing a key role in our global strategy of expansion and growth, and we’re excited to be here.”

Stefan Müller, Global Industry Lead for MedTech, adds: “We evaluated several potential locations across the region, and have been very impressed with the infrastructure and the efficiency of the processes for setting up a new business. We feel very confident about our choice of Singapore.”

Dana Leitman, Head of APAC, says: " As new digital technologies converge into traditional healthcare, it creates infinite opportunities for better prevention, diagnosis, and therapies. It’s an honour to join Arcondis here in Singapore, and I’m keen to deliver on the promise of our company motto: We make healthcare better”.

ARCONDIS is a global consulting company with an exclusive focus on the healthcare and life science industries, with their particularly demanding requirements on quality and regulatory affairs. The company addresses challenges and solves problems in the areas of compliance, business processes, information technology, and digital transformation since 2001.

Arcondis is headquartered in Switzerland and also has offices near Frankfurt and Munich, Germany, and in Boston, USA. An industry survey conducted by Statista ranked Arcondis as one of the Top 10 Healthcare consultancies in Switzerland.
