The three-day conference will feature more than 100 presentations by leading international industry experts over 21 sessions. The exhibition will showcase offerings from more than 550 companies from 30 countries.

And this year the BIO One-on-one Partnering platform will be held in both onsite and online formats to better facilitate meetings across borders and time zones. So far more than 400 companies have registered to participate, with more than 2,000 meetings expected to be held.

"Supply chain and CDMO [contract development and manufacturing organization] utilization has become more important since the onset of the pandemic, and BIO Asia–Taiwan 2022 will focus on these critical elements. And with the theme 'Connecting the Asian Value Chain', BIO Asia–Taiwan 2022 will showcase innovation, market, supply and investment value linkages to and within the Asian biomedical ecosystem", said Johnsee Lee, Chairman of the BIO Asia–Taiwan Organizing Committee.

Another new feature will be a multi-country 'Regional Collaboration Forum', including participation from Japan, the United Kingdom, Australia, India, and Singapore.
