

Taiwan's Lotus Pharma commences distribution of Uro-Vaxom® in South Korea

July 7, 2026 | News

Addition of Uro-Vaxom® will further strengthen urology product portfolio in South Korea

Lotus Pharmaceutical, a global pharmaceutical company headquartered in Taiwan, has announced that its wholly owned subsidiary Alvogen Korea has commenced distribution of Uro-Vaxom® in South Korea, as part of the commercial transition under Lotus' previously announced agreement with OM Pharma to acquire the product rights in South Korea. OM Pharma is a global biopharmaceutical company headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland.

As part of the commercial transition arrangements under the agreement, Alvogen Korea assumed responsibility for the distribution of Uro-Vaxom®. The transfer of the marketing authorisation to Alvogen Korea is expected to be completed in the fourth quarter of 2026.

Uro-Vaxom® has an established clinical profile and long-standing market presence as an oral immunoactive product for the prevention of recurrent urinary tract infections.

The product is currently marketed in more than 40 countries and reached more than one million patients globally in 2025. The addition of Uro-Vaxom® adds to Lotus' specialty portfolio in urology and infectious disease prevention, further strengthening the company's commercial presence in South Korea, one of its key Asian markets.