Roche Korea appoints a new GM

Singapore: Swiss pharma giant Roche recently appointed Mr Matt Sause as the new general manager for its Korean branch. Mr Sause was the former chief of Roche Pharma Peru. He was also the former director of Roche Diagnostics Ireland and a former member of Roche Diagnostics UK's leadership team.

Mr Sause, joined Roche Group in 2002 and has accumulated experience in marketing and organization management across the US, Europe, South America and Asian markets, managing Roche's businesses in the molecular diagnostics and pharmaceuticals development arena.

"Korea is considered as a key market within Roche Group, and I am very pleased to assume this important role," Mr Sause said in a statement. "I will devote myself to improving the quality of the lives of Korean patients by strengthening access to innovative medicines by collaborating with various health care professionals and stakeholders."
